[ALERT]

Good evening, my name is Mike Halligan. I was slated, and partially paid, to produce a sculpture for you guys. My last contact with you guys is apparently no longer there. Quick background, the location and design of this project changed a few times. At some point in the recent past, I realized I can not complete this project as it was initially intended and have made the decision to cancel the project. It would not be built to quality that I could stand behind, and it would not have the longevity that I believe the local taxpayers should get from an art piece that is this expensive. I am not sure the best course of action to move forward or if you're even the correct person to be in contact with. I have a few different proposals but would like to be in contact with someone at the city first. Please let me know if you're not the right person for me to be reaching out to. Thanks for your time, have a great evening.
