

FIRST 1,000 DAYS MURAL DESIGN

Attached is my submission for the First 1,00 Days Mural proposed for North Port, Florida. Included is the original black and white sketch and a color rendition. There are aspects of each which I would refer to in producing a final cartoon.

After driving south on 41 past the prospective mural site, I decided the mural needed to be a design viewers enjoy from their vehicles or from the sidewalk, that being a singular image, strong in composition and dimension.

Additionally, realizing the purpose of the mural is to draw attention to early childhood development, a child should be the focal point of the mural.

With an eye towards design, integrating these notions onto a large roof peaked canvas, I envisioned a powerful vantage point for a young child swinging out and into the world.

Serenaded by colorful birds, the child notices a cute rabbit being tugged up to play by a heart shaped balloon.

An open book provides a backdrop and a jumping off point for the child's development and learning.

Down below a colorful patchwork represents the diverse world we live in.

Thank you for considering my work for this important initiative. I would be honored to be selected.
